The soldiers without the green bar are the ones you have to kill. Join a room with players from all over the world in Combat Strike 2 online on Silvergames.com. In this classic shooting game, you play an elite soldier as part of a team fighting against another team. Explore the expansive and varied maps and environments. Find the bottlenecks to trap your opponents in, and take them down methodically. Lead your team to victory by effectively using a wide range of weapons. Purchase upgrades for your fighter and lead your team to victory. Let's see how long are you going to last in Combat Strike 2. Controls: WASD = move, Mouse = aim / shoot, 1-2 = choose gun, Shift = sprint, C = crouch, F = take gun, T = chat © Provided by National Post Known simply as 'Wali,' the former Canadian Armed Forces veteran has been living in Ukraine since March 2. A few days after the elite Canadian sniper 'Wali' arrived in Ukraine, a SWAT team raided his hideout, where he was holed up with fellow foreign fighters. "Despite being undercover, the population had alerted the authorities," he said. "It was an experience that shook people up, having been shoved to the wall and sometimes to the ground with a boot close to their face." The Canadian priest, standing against Putin The SWAT team confronted him in Russian and 'Wali' said he thought he would be captured as a Russian soldier and probably killed. "Soldiers in the house put their hands up in the air like prisoners. One of the volunteers was talking to his wife on the phone. He was slammed to the floor." Pretty quickly, however, the SWAT team gathered that the group of foreigners was there to help and, at last, they joked and shared a laugh. "It put everyone in a good mood. It even allowed us to make more contacts in Ukraine," he said. The marksman, identified only as Wali to protect his family's safety, has responded to President Volodymyr Zelenskyy's call for foreign fighters to assist in the war against Russia. He left behind his programming job, his wife and infant son to cross the frontier from Poland with three other Canadian veterans with sniping gear and a camera in tow. "Reality is today I am a programmer taking back his elite shooter carbine," the 40-year-old retired veteran of the Canadian Armed Forces wrote on Friday. "I'm a good soldier no more. But I'm still good and I plan to contribute, at least a little bit, to the victory of this people who so want to be free." Guerre en Ukraine | Wali répond à l'appel de Zelensky ♦♦ La Presse (@LP_LaPresse) March 2, 2022 The Canadian sniper told CBC he received an enthusiastic reception from both Ukrainian citizens and soldiers when he arrived on March 2. "They were so happy to have us," he said. "It's like we were friends right away." Wali served with the Royal Canadian Infantry's feared 22nd Regiment twice during the war in Afghanistan, in Kandahar between 2009 and 2011 as a sniper, and battled ISIS in Iraq as a volunteer fighter with Kurdish forces in 2015. The 22nd Regiment is known for having elite snipers with world-class training and equipment. According to official figures, more than 20,000 foreign volunteers from 52 countries have signed up to join the fight against the ongoing Russian invasion. © Facebook Wali served in the 22nd Regiment in Afghanistan and is now in Ukraine. Soon after Wali arrived in Ukraine, he embedded himself with British and Canadian veterans. In the days that followed, he would fill jerry cans with fuel to make Molotov cocktails and buy amateur drones to conduct surveillance, he told La Presse. Wali explained that he answered the call from a friend who was providing humanitarian supplies to the Donbas region. "He told me they needed a sniper. It's like a firefighter who hears the alarm ringing. I had to go," Wali's wife said she grudgingly let her husband go fight for Ukraine. "I knew that if I didn't let him go, I would have broken him," she told U.K.'s The Sun. "It would have been like putting him in jail." Wali says he was motivated to confront Russia after witnessing the suffering of Ukrainian citizens. "I want to help them. It's as simple as that. When I see a destroyed building, it is the person who owns it, who sees his pension fund go up in smoke, that I see," Wali explained. "I'm going there for humanitarian reasons." The Quebec man keeps an online diary of his experience in Ukraine that details snapshots of homegrown resistance — along with close encounters in tandem with Ukrainian forces. He described the resourcefulness with which Ukrainians have responded to the Russian invasion. "A heroic atmosphere reigns here. We no longer count the stories of fighters and ordinary people defying the Russian Army. In one example, a farmer waited for the Russians to disembark their tanks during a break. He then towed the tanks with his tractor! Imagine that!" He also related the quick thinking of residents in a city apartment block who trapped Russian soldiers in a building elevator by cutting off the power. On March 7, he said he saw AK-47s pointed at him and ready to open fire as he approached a manned checkpoint at night. After several inspections, the soldiers understood they were volunteer fighters and the mood quickly changed. Wali also details the hardships he witnesses on the road. "This is an apocalypse in the making. Poor people. Soon we enter a service station. Looking at the menu... Realizing there's no more food available. I look around and realize the tables are empty. People will eat whatever is left over." He added: "the roads are filled with refugees and stopped cars," while enemy helicopters fly overhead like "predators." The hardest part about leaving was missing his son's first birthday, said Wali. "I know, it's just awful," he said. "But me, in my head, when I see the images of destruction in Ukraine, it is my son that I see, in danger and who is suffering." Becoming a successful Nerf sniper takes patience, precision, and the perfect location. It also takes the right Nerf sniper rifle. Finding the best Nerf sniper rifle will make you truly unbeatable when it comes to taking out the enemy (okay, annoying siblings) with one swift shot. Fancy getting your hands on the best Nerf sniper rifle? There's a lot to choose from - here's what to look out for before you buy. Distance The best Nerf sniper rifle has to go the distance. The long-distance range will shoot down the enemy before they even know what's happened, and it means you can find a great spot. and spy on them from afar! Most Nerf sniper rifles will fire between 50 and 100 feet. Accuracy Accuracy is paramount, but when it comes to choosing the best Nerf snipers, it's the consistency that gives you the accuracy. Cheaper models may fire each shot differently, while battery-powered or higher quality guns will fire each shot the same way. This allows you to perfect your aim before you go into battle. Portability Nerf sniper rifles are usually quite large, and this adds to the fun! They are still generally lightweight, most weighing no more than 7lbs which makes them easy to carry. Snipers can be less portable than Nerf machine guns as they require staying still in one place. Durability Likewise, Nerf snipers are likely to last longer than pistols and machine guns simply because they receive less running-around-the-house-screaming use. Instead, you set yourself up in position and stay there until it's time to strike. However, Nerf guns are still plastic so not completely immune to damage. Read reviews on the model you buy to check it doesn't regularly jam. Bipod An included bipod will keep the gun stable while you aim and fire. It's far harder to get an accurate shot if you have to hold the gun yourself, and while you can create your own bipod to support the rifle, many have them included. How To Be A Nerf Sniper Becoming an awesome Nerf sniper requires good aim, good preparation, good camouflage, patience, and the ability to stay calm under pressure. Of course, you also need the best Nerf sniper rifle! A Good Aim Providing you have the best Nerf sniper rifle, a good aim can be easily developed. Practice shooting different targets from a range of distances and in a range of conditions. Then, when you've mastered taking down something static - try to shoot something that's moving (not your unsuspecting cat!). Ask someone to gently roll a ball and have a go at shooting that. Preparation Good preparation involves being fit enough to get to vantage points as quickly as you can, having plenty of ammo and a backup gun. While sniper shooting is done at a distance, you never know when the enemy might sneak up on you - have a backup blaster just in case. Camouflage Learn to hide from the enemies with the camouflage basics. Wear colors that blend in with your environment, and camouflage your gun too - these are often bright orange so either paint it or cover it with a dark blanket. Patience Patience is key. Being a real sniper involves lying on your belly for weeks before finally having a shot. Wait until the target is in range and in sight, and take into account the wind speed. Stay quiet and take deep breaths so you don't lose your nerve! Conclusion With such a variety of Nerf guns on the market, finding the best Nerf sniper rifle should be a walk in the park. Whether you're buying for the kids to keep them entertained on a Sunday afternoon, or you fancy reliving your childhood by taking out your work colleagues from a distance, a Nerf sniper rifle guarantees you hours of fun - while testing your patience at the same time! Now that you have read our reviews for the best nerf blaster guns on the market, make sure that you get a great nerf blaster with mega darts, bolt action, and any other fun features you like the sound of. Which gun have you chosen? We would love to hear about it! FAQ Q: Are Nerf guns suitable for all ages? A: The official recommended age set by Nerf is 14 and upwards; however, children as young as eight years old can play with the guns if they are careful and responsible. Use your discretion and parental judgment to assess if your child is ready to play with a Nerf gun. Q: Can a Nerf bullet kill you? A: It is very unlikely that a Nerf bullet will kill you as they can't travel at the speeds required to cause serious damage. With that being said, you should always be careful with your Nerf gun and do not fire it at unexpected people. Q: Can I get my nerf gun wet? A: Nerf gun interiors should stay dry at all times. If you are playing with the gun in the rain, then it should be fine. Q: Is modding a Nerf gun illegal? A: Nerf guns should not be modified as any modifications could make the gun very dangerous. Q: Is it illegal to spray paint my Nerf gun black? A: It is not illegal to paint your toy gun black in most places; however, you might arouse suspicion and concern if you start modifying your toy gun. Sources:
